APPLICATION 6: PSYCHIATRIC OR PSYCHOLOGICAL INJURY

1. Under what circumstances is a psychiatric or psychological injury compensable?

WCB will consider a claim for psychiatric or psychological injury when there is a confirmed psychological or psychiatric diagnosis as defined in the most current version of the Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders, (DSM)* and the condition results from one of the following:

- organic brain damage
- an emotional reaction to a work-related physical injury
- an emotional reaction to a work-related treatment process
- traumatic onset psychological injury or stress
- chronic onset psychological injury or stress

(See Question 11 for further details on when WCB accepts claims for chronic onset psychological injury or stress.)

*NOTE: When a new edition is published, WCB will designate an effective date, as close as practicable to the date for publication, for use of the new edition (see Addendum A).

2. How does WCB determine whether a psychiatric or psychological injury is compensable?

As with other types of injuries, to be compensable the psychiatric or psychological injury must arise out of and occur in the course of employment. Unless elsewhere specified, WCB uses the “but for” test to determine causation (see Policy 02-01, Part II, Application 7). Additional criteria applying to specific circumstances are contained in this policy (for example, see chronic onset stress in Question 11).

APPLICATION 6: PSYCHIATRIC OR PSYCHOLOGICAL INJURY

3. How does WCB determine ongoing compensability for psychiatric or psychological injuries? Ongoing compensability for a worker's psychiatric or psychological injury will be evaluated on a case by case basis. It will be accepted when the medical evidence shows that the current symptoms are caused by the work or work-related injury (that is, when the appropriate causation test is still met - see Questions 2 and 11).
4. When is organic brain damage compensable? Organic brain damage is compensable when it is causally connected to a work-related head injury, exposure to toxic chemicals or gases, anoxia, or other work-related injury, disease, or condition.
5. When is an emotional reaction to a work-related physical injury compensable? An emotional reaction is compensable when it is in response to the work-related physical injury (for example, depression related to prolonged disability or an amputation).
6. When is an emotional reaction to a work-related treatment process compensable? An emotional reaction to a treatment process is compensable when it is in response to a work-related treatment process (for example, complicated recovery from surgery, added pain from a treatment process).
7. What is mental stress? Mental stress is a commonly used term that describes an individual's non-specific physical and psychological response to the events or changes that occur in his or her life. These events are known as stressors. Some level of stress is a normal part of life; however, when a person's ability to cope with the stressors is overwhelmed, distress, a negative form of mental stress, can develop and result in diagnosable psychological or psychiatric injuries.

It should be noted that "stress" is not an accepted medical diagnostic term, but can result in psychiatric or psychological diagnoses such as adjustment disorders, anxiety disorders, or mood disorders, depending on the circumstances.

APPLICATION 6: PSYCHIATRIC OR PSYCHOLOGICAL INJURY

8. When is traumatic onset psychological injury or stress compensable?

Traumatic onset psychological injury or stress is compensable when it is an emotional reaction in response to a single traumatic work-related incident or a cumulative series of traumatic work-related incidents experienced by the worker.

A traumatic incident(s) is defined as a direct personal experience of an event or directly witnessing an event that, reasonably and objectively assessed, is:

- sudden,
- frightening or shocking,
- having a specific time and place, and
- involving actual or threatened death or serious injury to oneself or others or threat to one’s physical integrity.

For example: a victim of a robbery or hostage-taking incident; witnessing the death or severe injury of a co-worker; or providing first response to victims of severe physical trauma or fatalities.

A full psychological or psychiatric evaluation may not be required for short-term claims for psychological injury resulting from a single traumatic work-related incident.

Presumption for accidents on or after April 1, 2018*

*For presumptions for PTSD see Question 9

If a worker:

- is, or has been, exposed to a traumatic event or events, as defined above, during the course of the worker’s employment, and
- is, or has been, diagnosed with a psychological injury by a physician or psychologist, the psychological injury shall be presumed, unless the contrary is proven, to be an injury that arose out of and occurred during the course of employment. If questions arise about the linkage between the event and the injury, or reporting is unclear, further investigation may be required to determine appropriate benefits.

9. What is the presumptive coverage for workers under section 24.2 of the WCA, who are diagnosed with post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD)?

Section 24.2 of the WCA provides that, if a correctional officer, emergency dispatcher, firefighter, paramedic, peace officer, or police officer, as defined in the section, or any other class of worker prescribed by the regulations, is diagnosed with PTSD by a physician or a psychologist, WCB will presume the PTSD arose out of and occurred in the course of employment, unless the contrary is proven.

The diagnosis of PTSD must meet the criteria described in the most recent edition of the Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders published by the American Psychiatric Association.

NOTE: from December 10, 2012, to April 1, 2018, inclusive, presumptive coverage for PTSD applied only to first responders: emergency medical technicians, firefighters, peace officers, and police officers as defined in the WCA.

10. When is chronic onset psychological injury or stress compensable?

Chronic onset psychological injury or stress is compensable when it is an emotional reaction to:

- a) an accumulation, over time, of a number of work-related stressors that do not fit the definition of traumatic incident,
- b) a significant work-related stressor that has lasted for a long time and does not fit the definition of traumatic incident, or
- c) both a) and b) together, and when all the criteria outlined in Question 11 below are met.

APPLICATION 6: PSYCHIATRIC OR PSYCHOLOGICAL INJURY

11. When does WCB accept claims for chronic onset stress?

As with any other claim, WCB investigates the causation to determine whether the claim is acceptable. Claims for this type of injury are eligible for compensation only when all of the following criteria are met:

- there is a confirmed psychological or psychiatric diagnosis as described in the DSM,
- the work-related events or stressors are the predominant cause of the injury; predominant cause means the prevailing, strongest, chief, or main cause of the chronic onset stress,
- the work-related events are excessive or unusual in comparison to the normal pressures and tensions experienced by the average worker in a similar occupation, and
- there is objective confirmation of the events.

In addition to the duties reasonably expected by the nature of the worker’s occupation, normal pressures and tensions include, for example, interpersonal relations and conflicts, health and safety concerns, union issues, and routine labour relations actions taken by the employer, including workload and deadlines, work evaluation, performance management (discipline), transfers, changes in job duties, lay-offs, demotions, terminations, and reorganizations, to which all workers may be subject from time to time.

Ongoing compensability for chronic onset stress will be accepted when the medical evidence shows that the work or work-related injury is the predominant cause of the current symptoms.

WCB may provide treatment for a non-compensable psychiatric or psychological condition as a rehabilitative measure if treatment might:

- accelerate recovery from a compensable physical disability, or
- lessen or eliminate any handicap resulting from a compensable accident.

An offer of treatment for an unrelated condition is entirely at WCB's discretion and does not imply any acceptance of responsibility for the underlying cause.

13. When is this policy application effective?

This policy application (Application 6 – Psychiatric or Psychological Injury) is effective April 1, 2018, and applies to all decisions made on or after that date, except when noted otherwise in a specific policy section(s).
